Looking for Treasure!

You are going on a trip to Peru, a country in South America. On your adventure you will climb mountains and explore thick, dark jungle. You will see ruins and lots of unusual animals. If you are lucky, you hope to find Inca treasure hidden in the jungle to give to a museum in Peru!

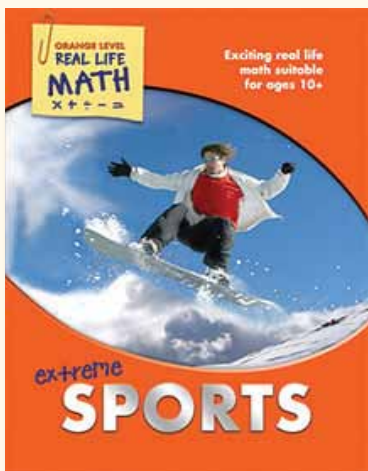

The Inca people lived in Peru about 500 years ago. This is an Inca picture of ten warriors.

This is a gold Inca mask. The Incas had lots of gold and silver treasure.

- The Inca kings put their people into groups of 10, 100, and 1,000. This made it easier for the kings to organize them: How many groups of 10 is 40?
- How many groups of 10 are there in 110?
- If you put 82 people into groups of 10, how many groups of 10 will there be?
- How many people will be left over?
- Round each of these numbers to the nearest 10: 33 65 78 40 96
- Which of these numbers have a 5 in the hundreds place: 35 579 56 1,509 1,536

Real Life Math (Blue Level): Treasure in the Jungle

SKATEBOARDING with Oli

Oli says, "Skateboarding is more than just a sport - there's a whole culture based around it, with companies dedicated to producing clothes, shoes, and videos for skateboarders. Skateboarding can give you an immense sense of satisfaction, and it's also a great way to meet new people. Skateboarding is a very technical and difficult sport, and there are hundreds of tricks to learn. To be a good skateboarder, you need to be athletic and creative. The best skateboarders also have plenty of nerve and lots of dedication, because many top tricks can take years of practice to get right!"

A trick called the "drop in" to a halfpipe.

GO FOR IT!

Here are three skateboard tricks. What fraction of a whole turn has the skateboarder made in each trick, and how many degrees are there in the angle of the turn?

POWERKICKS (trick 1 and 2): You shift your weight to one side of the board and slide the back wheel around into a sort of slide. This is a good way of slowing down.

SHOVE (trick 3): Do an ollie and while you are in the air, spin the board around underneath you.

SKATEBOARDING FACTS: The first ever skateboarder trick is the ollie, which was invented in the late 1970s by Alan "Ollie" Gelfand. A skateboarder jumps on the tail of their board with their back foot. As the tail hits the ground, the skater hops up off their feet into the air - the board comes, too! The skater then pushes forward with their front foot, keeps the board and drops to the ground. Skateboarders can pull off one over their feet high, and it's tricky to do though the board is actually stuck to their feet!

CHALLENGE QUESTIONS

This skateboard wheel has made parts of a whole turn. How many degrees is that?

Start 45 90 135 180 225 270 315 360

TRICK TALK

AKI "It's all" is a jump into the air with a skateboard.

BAR Like a bar, this describes a skateboarder's trick that is performed over a long distance or in a long time.

FLIP When you board completely flip over and land back on the wheel.

GOOFY If you skate or skateboard with your right foot forward.

SKATEBOA Followed on a halfpipe, the skateboarder slides on the one wheel of the board with the front wheel raised up from the ground.

MANUEA Twisting on your back, skaters do just the one wheel, or wheelie.

OSCAR If you skate or skateboard with your left foot forward.

REVERT Making a trick coming out forward and then quickly sliding around 180 degrees to come out backward.

SHOOT When someone is really and just about back a trick, the trick is really.

SMAR Lifting off your skateboard and landing yourself.

SWITCHBOARD Skating or skateboarding in the opposite direction to the way you usually skate.

Real Life Math (Orange Level): Extreme Sports

Real Life Math

Making math interesting, this set of math practice books involves the reader in real-world activities as they learn how math is used in occupations ranging from zookeepers to firefighters to archaeologists. Readers will discover how math is used for everyday problem-solving, calculating, and organizing information while also learning about these fascinating occupations. Designed for grades 2-6, these books provide CCSS skill building to the maximum degree.

12 WEAPONS OF WAR

The attack aircraft not only had to deliver heavy, accurate air-to-ground fire, it also had to demonstrate survivability.

during the 1950s and 1960s. One of the first was the Sukhoi Su-7, which was designed as a supersonic fighter in 1955. The aircraft struggled to meet fighter requirements, however, so it was reconfigured for a low-altitude attack role, which manifested itself in the Su-7B in 1958. The Su-7B became the dominant Soviet attack aircraft of the 1960s, and was widely exported, particularly to the Middle East and India, where it demonstrated an unimpressive combat performance. (One notable problem was that the poor cockpit design led to pilots positioning themselves awkwardly in the seat, resulting in fatal injuries if they had to eject suddenly.) The Su-7B was largely replaced by the Sukhoi Su-17

In the 1970s, this aircraft offering improved take-off and landing performance and better firepower. Like its predecessor — and indeed many of the Soviet-era jets — the Su-17 enjoyed widespread export success. The United Kingdom also invested in new attack aircraft, yet in the context of a confused and inefficient policy towards developing its Cold War air fleet. In terms of purely home-grown attack aircraft, the typical UK postwar attack aircraft was the Blackburn/Hawker Siddeley Buccaneer. The Buccaneer received poor reviews during its service life. It was an ungainly aircraft to look at, and its maximum speed was 690 mph (1,110 km/h) — such speeds didn't exactly catch the imagination in
