RIGHT IN THE MIDDLE BUT LEFT OUT

Jeffery Trees

$10.99 • 149 pages • 978-1-64069-609-9

How can a Pastor provide advice, counsel, and encouragement at the church when he, himself is having problems and is becoming a problem to the community? Author Jeffery

Trees shares a heartrending story of his experiences of learning that his first wife has repressed memories of being an incest victim, of being a Pastor at a church where no one could offer help, and of going through it all with his new wife who had a physical disability. In his memoir, Right in the Middle but Left Out, he hopes that readers will find inspiration and hope from what he went through, so they can also stand up and get through with whatever issues or conflicts they are dealing with right now.

The author's first wife was an incest victim as a child and when she was forced through circumstances to bring back up the repressed memories, each member of the family was changed. Nine months went by before his wife was able to express what she was dealing with. Society has made incest a taboo issue and no one knew the extent of such devastation this would bring into life for the author and his family, friends, Church and other employers, as well as insurance companies.

No one within the Church knew how to deal with issues of incest and what it does to a family and a Pastor never did anything to bring help into the situation. Even though he asked for help from the Bishop, District Superintendent and asked who was in charge of insurance, no help was ever given.

He asked for visitation for his wife and family and never received any help of any kind so there was no resolution. This even caused a deep problem with the Church with his new wife who had a physical disability. He became a problem rather than a pastor for the United Methodist Church. But through it all, God took care of everyone through His grace. And this proves that God is the refuge everyone seeks.

The Ultimate Study Guide for CLEP® Exams

CLEP Ó CollegeBoard

CLEP° Official Study Guide

The only exam guide created by the test developer

Sponsored by The College Board, the College Level Examination Program® (CLEP®) has been helping students save time and money on their degree programs for over 40 years. This credit-by-exam program allows students to take inexpensive tests and earn transferable college credit in a variety of academic subjects.

Beneficial for students who want to test out of intro-level college courses, research has also found that students who take prior-learning assessments like CLEP tend to have higher GPAs and higher college completion rates.

This volume contains practice questions for all 33 subject-specific exams along with valuable suggestions on how to prepare for the text.

Georgian Soviet Modernist Mosaics from 1960-1990

Nini Palavandishvili DOMP and Lena Prents

Monumental, decorative mosaics were created in public spaces of Tbilisi during the Soviet era in the 1970s and 1980s. Yet architectural critics have largely dismissed them as little more than propagandistic tools. The authors of this guide set out to restore the image of Georgian mosaics, arguing that they were architectural artworks in their own right. 280 pp.

THE WOVEN FLAG

MARGARET FOURT GOKA

$8.31 • 76 pages • 9781946492708

For someone who has grown up enjoying writing poetry, there's no better way to share her literary world to all than with the beautiful verses of The Woven Flag. Untangle the poetic threads and lines of her poetry collection as she weaves experiences, memories and emotions throughout these pages.

The Woven Flag is poet-author Margaret Goka's volume of poetry about home and family, places, animals, inspiration, questions and answers. It begins with poems by a young mother; then there is a group of poems inspired by animals, both real and imaginary. Following this are memories about places; and the next poems give you some questions you may have to guess about. There are also poems inspired from coffee, tea or wine. And finally, there are poems coming from remembrances of her parents and her husband.

Margaret Goka left home in Maryland to attend college in St. Louis, Missouri at Washington University, majoring in English Literature. Afterwards, she moved to California. She completed a M.A. in Linguistics at San Jose State University, and taught English as a Second Language at Evergreen Valley College. She now has three daughters and six grandchildren. She has written poetry since she was young, and wrote these poems as her children grew up and established their own separate lives. She collected the poems written since she came to California in The Woven Flag.

DESTINY 2ND EDITION MAHLON PALMER

$14.99 • 252 pages • 9781640698819

He was destined to do more.

The author's autobiography is an inspiring true story of how one can shape his Destiny with sheer determination and willpower.

It's not how one is born that will determine his fate; what is important is how he will live his life to reach his Destiny. And that is what this book is about. Author Mahlon "Dick" Palmer writes this book primarily for those young boys and girls and their parents and/or mentors who, for whatever reason, believe they have no chance at a successful life. This is the story about a young boy who believed he was in that category while growing up. The author hopes that readers will continue reading to see how that little boy changed those odds and ultimately did many things that most people cannot even dream of.

There are many children that are born into poverty and thus have no apparent reason to try to succeed. That was the case with the author, who was the youngest of four boys and was certainly not a welcome addition to the Palmer family. He was born in the midst of the greatest depression the country has ever experienced, thus another mouth to feed and clothe was not a welcome addition. There was one positive benefit though; this child did provide a cheap source of labor. He was expected to work 12-14 hour days, every day until he left home to join the Air Force when he was 17 years old.

JAMES BRABAZON

The Break Line

A STUNNING DEBUT THRILLER

9780440001478 | $27.00 HC | Berkley Books

Brabazon is an author, journalist, and documentary filmmaker. Based in the UK, he has traveled to over 70 countries—investigating, filming, and directing in the world's most hostile environments. He is the author of the international bestseller My Friend the Mercenary, a memoir recounting his experiences of the Liberian civil war and the Equatorial Guinea coup plot.

66 He looked left and right quickly, dropped the half-finished cigarette into the ashtray and put his crooked trigger finger to his lips. 'Shh.'

"Martin is prone to bouts of excitement, Mr. McLean; bouts of excitement that can provoke unpredictable responses."

"Such as?"

"Such as strong physical reactions. I'd ask you to be brief, Mr. McLean, and not to discuss any of the details of his last, er, deployment. He gets very nervous about that. Very agitated." Crossman turned to the guard on her left and nodded. The guard entered a series of digits on a keypad on the wall between them.

"You mean in Russia, Counselor?"

"No, Mr. McLean." She turned and tapped the second part of the passcode into the keypad. The door slid open, revealing a vestibule, a second door with a transparent panel, and beyond it a single bed supporting Sonny Boy's tracksuit-clad hulk. I stepped forward, and the main door began to close behind me. "Not Russia. Your friend here was evacuated from Sierra Leone."

Soldiers don't impress me. They get paid to do a job. Either they do it well, or they don't. And Special Forces aren't superheroes. They sh*t, piss, bleed and grouse like everyone else-including the Queen they serve. But Sonny Boy? He wasn't a soldier. He was a fing legend. And there he was, sat like Buddha in a soft-furnished hell, hand-rolling a pinch of tobacco. He looked straight through me toward the closing door.

"Long time, Max."

"Long time, Sonny. How you been keeping?"

"Aw, you know . . ." He looked left and right quickly, dropped the half-finished cigarette into the ashtray and put his crooked trigger finger to his lips. "Shh."

He eased himself off the bed and stood an arm's length in front of me: six foot six and two hundred and fifty pounds of soft-spoken, stone-cold killer. Then, at a half crouch, he loped toward the far left-hand end of the room. He pointed at me, put his finger to his lips again and stood there, stockstill, with one ear pressed against the beige wall. A full minute passed. I shifted my weight, but he held up his hand as if stopping traffic at a checkpoint. Another minute. And another-Sonny Boy unmoving, listening.

"You're all right," he blurted out, finally. "It's grand. They've gone. Ha! How've I been keeping? Christ, Max, you wouldn't fin' believe it if I told you. You wouldn't believe it for a moment!" He sighed and laughed and sat back down on the bed, hard. "Sure, you wouldn't believe a single word of it. But there you go." He looked down at the floor. We grew up a country mile and a world apart in County Wicklow. His accent echoed my own childhood broque, which had been softened in the army.

Linched toward the bed

"Believe what, Sonny? What's up?"

Without warning, a deep, trembling sob spluttered out of him, followed by an awful keening so forceful it made me recoil. He looked up. Tears blurred his eyes. His teeth were clenched, the muscles in his jaw bulging. I put my hand out to him, fingers first, like seducing a wary dog. He said, did, nothing. I put my hand on his shoulder. He flinched.

"Hey, Sonny," I whispered. "It's OK. I'm here. It's grand." I sat next to him, slowly, deliberately lowering myself onto the bed next to him. His hands had fallen into his lap. Tears were falling on them. I took his pistol hand in mine and held it gently. "It's all right now. It's all right."

Sonny Boy half turned to me. His lips were trembling, his iaw slackened.

"You wouldn't fin' believe it, Max," he sobbed, trying to compose himself.

66 He lurched into me, twisting and crashing me onto the floor. My hand in his; his face against mine; his teeth at my ear; he deafened me with a cry fit to rend my soul.

"Believe what, Sonny? Do you want to tell me about it?" Nothing. "We don't have to talk. Hey, remember that time in Kabul when-"

"You're going, aren't you?"

"Going where, Sonny?"

"There."

"What, Sierra Leone?" As soon as I spoke, I realized my mistake. He gripped my hand hard and looked me in the eye as if suddenly seeing something for the first time.

"That's why they sent you to see me, isn't it? They're still sending you. That's why they sent me." His voice was quiet, steady. "Ah, not you, Max. Please, not you."

I went to reassure him, but it was too late. He lurched into me, twisting and crashing me onto the floor. My hand in his; his face against mine; his teeth at my ear; he deafened me with a cry fit to rend my soul.

I went limp, and rolled with him. My right hand was still free. I pushed his head back hard. My thumb gouged his face. I rotated my left wrist and pulled it back to my chest. Both hands free. He lifted a massive balled fist, but I hit him first with a left brachial punch. Sonny roared in pain-half-blind, arm paralyzed-and collapsed on me, his forearm across my throat. The room blackened. I braced and struck his carotid artery. No effect. My windpipe was collapsing. Blackness. I punched again. He rolled off and found his feet, facing me like an obscene Cyclops. I landed a short jab to his brachial plexus. He swung and missed. I lunged inside his reach, the base of my right palm to the tip of his nose. Blood gushed from his face. My left wrist to his right ear, then my right palm to the bridge of his nose, crushing the cartilage completely. I kept at him. My left elbow to his left ear, hard. He went down. But I was too close and went down with him, pinned under his massive weight again.

Two men in black appeared beside me, electric pistols drawn. Neither fired. My palms found Sonny's temples. His eye hung from its socket onto my cheek. He was bleeding heavily from his mouth, nose and ears; hemorrhaging into his throat and onto my face. The room filled with a woman's voice, and the smell of peppermint and blood iron. I forced his head up, and he looked down through his one dying eye. As my hands began to twist his neck, he smiled and relaxed.

"They're coming, Max. They're coming."

From the New York Times Bestselling Author of Descent

TIMJOHNSTON

Tim Johnston, whose breakout debut Descent was called "astonishing," "dazzling," and "unforgettable" by critics, returns with The Current, a tour de force about the indelible impact of a crime on the lives of innocent people.

STRICT ON-SALE DATE: JANUARY 22, 2019 $27.95 Hardcover • ISBN: 978-1-61620-677-2

"The Current is a rare creature: a gripping thriller and page turner but also a masterwork of mood and language—a meditation on memory and time."

—IVY POCHODA, author of Wonder Valley

"Tim Johnston's second novel, The Current, is even better than his first, which is saying something. He's a terrific writer and definitely a name to watch."

—DENNIS LEHANE, author of Since We Fell

"Haunting . . . this novel has at its heart a strong belief that love, for all the pain it brings, is the one thing that truly saves us."

BRAVO TWO SIERRA

STEPHEN R. GAGIN

$16.95, 356 PAGES, 9781594535604

A son's revenge culminates in the storm-raged Caribbean Sea.

When the world shunned him since birth, he grew up plotting the worst vengeance he could plan.

Readers will witness the rise of a son's hatred that consumed his revenge-filled heart, wreaking havoc and turmoil to the men responsible for his mother's death and exacting his vengeance on the man he blames for his station in life. Author Stephen R. Gagin introduces Santana J. Roja, the madman who leads his band of cutthroat, Satan-worshipping pirates, in "Bravo TWO Sierra", the first installment of his exciting series.

With the selling of Carmella Roja into a life of prostitution and drug abuse by her village priest, Santana Roja grows up a child of the alleys and whorehouses of Puerto Cortez. Shunned by the powerful Catholic Church for his illegitimacy, Santana swears faith to the arcane teachings of Satanism. Soon he is in control of the port city's vibrant black market. Tension is sustained through the individual sailing and port calls of the American salvage crew and Roja's gang of black marketers.

The final confrontation between father and son is as explosive as the hurricane that slams a Haitian gunrunner's ship aground in the Straits of Florida.

Bravo TWO Sierra captures all the flavors of serving on a small command, mixed with such a realistic scenario, that readers are sure to anticipate the release of its sequel, Code Alpha.

Everything a Band-aid Can't Fix

Nicole Russell 9781634891479, 216pp, paperback $16.95 Wise Ink Creative Publishing

"Dear ______, This book was written for YOU and all the curious young adults who are looking for an instruction manual on how to deal with the craziness of the teen years. It's a set of guidelines for understanding how to cope with feelings and experiences that aren't always easy to share. It will help you master the ability to defeat adversity with or without the help of others; it will encourage you to speak out against the wrongs in your world and help protect yourself from them.

Self-care doesn't require coverings. So hold the Band-Aids and let's get started."

Aiming High

Darren Prince 9781732500808, 290pp, hardcover, $24.95 Light Hustler

Aiming High is the astonishing story of sports and celebrity agent Darren Prince, who battled addiction while representing some of the most iconic names in the world. After a drug overdose, many demoralizing nights, and mornings where he couldn't get out of bed without a prescription in hand, Darren hit rock bottom at the top--and in the process discovered the true meaning of success.

Letters from Elvis

Gary Lindberg 9780998731964, 314pp, paperback, $16.99 Calumet Editions

Letters from Elvis is an explosive revelation of Elvis's inner life, an exposé of heinous Hollywood crimes that targeted Elvis, a touching tale of friendship, an eerie ghost story, and a series of startling new Elvis mysteries. Because rigorous copyright laws prevent direct publication of the actual letters, the book also tells the story of the author's thirty-year struggle to bring this information to light.

Drop the Puck: Hooray for Hockey Day!
