READING REIMAGINED

Today's reader is demanding—unquenchable appetites for knowledge, paired with limited attention spans and even less free time. The modern reader is curious, discerning, and hyperconnected. Content must be entertaining, provocative, and relevant, but accuracy always holds court. Short form, long form, an idea formed is all that really matters. From Plato to NATO, the subjects consumed are as diverse as the readers themselves. Flash Guides—content crafted to exceed today's readers' demands.

The Sage of Waterloo: A Tale

Leona Francombe
9780393246919, $22.95
W.W. Norton & Company

You may never have heard of Chateau d'Hougoumont, a large, centuries-old farmhouse near Waterloo, Belgium. 2015 marks the 200th anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo. This lovely little book is unusual. It is historical fiction, narrated by a rabbit living at the farm. We learn about how the animals sensed the impending attack through vibrations in the ground and how the repercussions of that battle continue to resound today. It is a tender and telling tale, and a new way to consider how human actions affect the natural world.

Arcadia Britannica: A Modern British Folklore Portrait

Henry Bourne
9780500517970, $29.95
Thames & Hudson

This captivating book chronicles Britain's greatest folk events, with color portraits of revelers in their finery. The Jack in the Green festival has people all dressed in green and "forestry;" the Nutters (coconut dancers) are featured along with their seven traditional dances. Includes pagans, the Burry Man, and other folkloric characters. These costumes and traditions are hundreds of years old, and a real link to the past—fun and fascinating!

The Star Side of Bird Hill

Naomi Jackson
9781594205958, $25.95
Penguin Press

Two Brooklyn sisters are sent from their homes to live in Barbados with their grandmother. Dionne is 16, facing the uncertainties and questions of that age; her sister Phaedra is 10 and beginning to understand how like her grandmother she is. This debut novel tells their story of losing a mother in Brooklyn and finding how they fit in with their island family, including a father they've never known.

Kay

The League of Regrettable Superheroes

Jon Morris
9781594747632, $24.95
Quirk Books

Meet some of the comic heroes who have been forgotten. From the Golden Age of Comics (1938-1949) Doctor Vampire, Madam Fatal, and Nelvana of the Northern Lights; from the Silver Age (1950-1969) Congorilla, Captain Science, and Spyman; from the Modern Age (1970-present) The Human Fly, Captain Ultra, and Man-Wolf. Read about these and many more "second-tier" superheroes, with the understanding that none of these characters are inherently bad. Many of them failed to reach success in the market due to bad timing or becoming lost in the crowd of other popular comics of their time. Sample pages of each "regrettable" comic are included along with the history and summation of the comic.

MUSE

A WITTY NOVEL ABOUT THE PUBLISHING INDUSTRY

photograph by Elaina Seibert

A sparkling fiction debut from the poet, translator, and FSG publisher that tells the story of the decades-long rivalry between two publishing lions over the work of an iconic female poet. Enriched by juicy details only a quintessential insider could know, written with both satiric sharpness and sensitivity, Muse is a hilarious and touching love letter to the people who write, sell—and, above all, read—the books that shape our lives.

You are the president and publisher of Farrar, Straus and Giroux; a poet; and a translator of Italian poets Eugenio Montale and Giacomo Leopardi. What led you to want to write a novel? And how do you find the time to do all of these things, and so well?

I've always worked on poetry and translations in my spare time. And I've always deeply loved working with fiction writers, though I never thought it was something I could do myself. In the summer of 2011, though, I decided to give it a try. After all, I'm not getting any younger. I wrote every day without looking at it, then put it away till the next summer, when I read it over and decided to give it a shot. I did it as a challenge to myself, an experiment, and found I loved it. It's about publishing and poets—so I was following that old rule:

write about what you know. And it's a comedy—light-hearted, irreverent, poking a little good-natured fun at our crazy world.

Does your voice as a poet differ from your voice as an author of fiction? If so, in what ways?

I think a poet's voice expresses his or her inner self—it can really only be what it is, because every other way of writing feels inauthentic. But novels are about other people, who aren't really the writer—though they can contain bits and pieces of him. So novels are made up of multiple voices. In Muse one of the main characters is a poet called Ida Perkins. I wrote Ida's poems in her voice. They're her poems, not mine. They express her inner self.

9780385353342 / $25.00 HC / Knopf Publishing Group

Muse* tells a story of a publishing house in New York City, located on Union Square. Your company, Farrar, Straus and Giroux, also happens to be located in New York City near Union Square. In reviewing the book, Gary Shteyngart (Absurdistan) stated that you have “all the dirt on the publishing industry and [you’re] ready to dish.” How much of the publishing industry “dirt” is based on your actual experiences?

I guess you’re asking if Muse is a roman à clef. Let’s just say it starts from my memories and takes off from there. The book reflects the changes in publishing that have happened over the last 40 years—it’s shocking to realize I’ve been at this so long). Purcell & Stern does resemble the way a house where I’ve long worked used to be, but even then it was an idiosyncratic throwback. And absolutely wonderful. I hope my affection for it comes through. The book is partly an elegy for that way of life, which is really gone now.

Will any of your colleagues and friends find that they’ve been turned into characters in the book? Will any of them be less than flattered?

A few of the heroic characters in Muse may recall certain heroic figures in recent publishing history. And the book does poke fun, in a gentle way—in particular, at a certain young editor who some might identify as sharing a few traits with the author. All of us have foibles and eccentricities: what would life, or fiction, be without them? And, yes, the book is peppered here and there with little homages to friends and colleagues. But many of the main characters and events in Muse are made up. Nor is it quite realistic. For instance, I doubt most publishers would be as all-out obsessed about a poet as my characters are; a novelist, maybe. But I hope anyone who reads it will respond to the love of literature that is the beating heart of Muse.

Are there more novels in your future, or will you focus on poetry or publishing?

I am working on a new fiction project, in my free time, and I want to write poems again some day. But publishing remains my day job, and, as I hope my novel shows, I really love it. For all the changes in our business, working with authors is as exciting and rewarding as ever.

What poets/authors are you reading now that you enjoy the most? Any up-and-comers you’d like to spread the word about?

So many! Apart from Jonathan Franzen’s Purity, out in September, I’m excited about Stephen Jarvis’ Death and Mr. Pickwick, an incredible Dickensian novel about the world out of which Dickens came, which we’re doing in June. And next year, there’s Steven Price’s By Gaslight, a lush and inventive literary thriller, also set in London, and C.E. Morgan’s big novel about horse racing, Sport of Kings. And we’re about to publish the Canadian poet Karen Solie, who’s really wonderful. To mention just a few...

FREDERICK LAW OLMSTED

Plans and Views of Public Parks

edited by Charles E. Beveridge, Lauren Meier, and Irene Mills

A superb visual overview of the major public parks designed by the foremost landscape architect in American history.

Lavishly illustrated with over 470 images—129 of them in color—this book reveals Frederick Law Olmsted’s design concepts for more than seventy public park projects through a rich collection of sketches, studies, lithographs, paintings, historical photographs, and comprehensive descriptions. Bringing together Olmsted’s most significant parks, parkways, park systems, and scenic reservations, this gorgeous volume takes readers on a uniquely conceived tour of such notable landscapes as Central Park, Prospect Park, the Buffalo Park and Parkway System, Washington Park and Jackson Park in Chicago, Boston’s “Emerald Necklace,” and Mount Royal in Montreal, Quebec. No such guide to Olmsted’s parks has ever been published.

"Most of Bernstein's stories end with the literary equivalent of a shrug – a distinctive New York gesture. These stories are both quaint and timeless, a fanciful addition to the literature of place..."

—Maureen Corrigan, Fresh Air

These seventeen stories capture a New York that recedes further into memory every year: a garment district populated by people with at least a passing acquaintanceship with the old country and older ways of making things.

Caretakers of the Universe: The Secret Force of Justice

Siegfried Holzinger

Paperback 978-1-941736-76-0 • $8.01

Hardback 978-1-941736-77-7 • $23.31

120 pages

When will mankind ever learn to respect and preserve the planet and humanity? Seems like time is running out as the CARETAKERS of the Universe are heading to Earth to teach man an age-old lesson we always – tend – to forget time and time again.

Follow an Australian resident as he gets contacted by Aliens – the CARETAKERS of the Universe – who will inform him that people on Earth have not evolved from apes as believed. The Aliens' forefathers began to colonize Earth 35,000 years ago... with different races from other planets throughout the universe.

Because of the high level of crime on Earth, the CARETAKERS are commissioned to eliminate all crime. The first step is to virtually eliminate the race committing the most crime. And secondly, the chosen Earthling will choose the appropriate punishment and all perpetrators will be incarcerated on a special planet. But what would be the ultimate punishment? Find out as you meet the CARETAKERS in this thrilling sci-fi, Caretakers of the Universe.

About the Author

Born in Germany, Siegfried Holzinger followed his father and grandfather into the master building industry. Inspired by the sun, sea and open spaces, he migrated to Australia at age 19. With no knowledge of the English language, he experienced many hilarious encounters while teaching himself English from TV.

However, he quickly earned a high reputation for his building skills, particularly his ability to create unique one-off design houses. Seeking a career change, he undertook a teaching diploma and taught building for 10 years. For a further challenge, he studied alternative therapy (massage, reflexology, Bowen, Ki-force healing) and ran a clinic for 5 years. He now enjoys writing, golf and dog breeding.

On Racial Icons looks at visual culture and race in the United States, in particular the significance of photography to document black public life. It examines America's fascination with representing and seeing race in a myriad of contexts as emblematic of national and racial progress at best, or as a gauge of a collective racial wound.

Never Give Up

Merv Leech

$7.56 • 70 pages • 978-1-941736-88-3

What would you do when your body can no longer do most of the previous pleasures of work and recreation you used to do as an adventurous person who enjoys traveling and the outdoors? It's a severely painful physical and emotional injury – or nightmare you wish you could wake up from. For author Merv Leech, it was a very challenging 9-year journey of pain and recovery.

In this biographical book, Leech shares about his life after a life-threatening motorcycle accident. It covers the injuries, the slow recovery, and the aspects of his journey that took place over a 9-year period. His hope is that others who have suffered from similar injuries or circumstances would be encouraged to Never Give Up but keep on being positive.

Hardcover 978-1-941736-67-8 • $25.80

If you and your kids are dog lovers, you would definitely enjoy sharing this illustrative picture book together. Spend some quality time with your little ones as you read the rhyming verses and delight in the vibrant pictures of A Passel of Puppies. Follow the exciting adventures of 12 fun-loving Leonberger puppies as they romp, roll and dance their way into your heart... And their playful exploits never end.

Author Rachel Dolan brought her first Leonberger puppy home 12 years ago. She is active in several rescues. She and her husband foster rescue dogs and share their home with 11 Leonbergers.

Illustrator Fiona Ogilvie has started her career in 2003 as a print designer, and eventually evolved to become a digital designer and web developer.

Poetry Therapy

Mira Ksiva

$7.56 • 64 pages • 978-1-942703-20-4

Accompany a young woman, going through life and dealing with depression/ anxiety, as she taps on her poetic skills to release the seemingly suppressed thoughts and sentiments insider her. Mainly told through poems and reflections that are both humorous and painful, you'll find these verses emotive as they evoke your very own thoughts as well.

These mental musings are designed to help everybody – clinically diagnosed or not – as we all go through these emotions at some point in our lives. This book is “therapoetic” and entertaining; everyone can relate to it.

Author Mira Ksiva has been dealing with mental illnesses for many years. For example, she loves to exercise and adores doing her kids' homework. Whenever she's not at work, she is always reading or writing.

Looking inwards and into the deepest recesses of one's own self may just be what everyone needs in this time of confusion, affliction, and chaos, caused by the busy, stressful and fast-paced lifestyle that seems to rule the people of today. What better way to escape the savageness and ruthlessness of today's world than to go back to one's own roots – one's own mind, heart, and body. That's what author Teja A. Jaensch hopes to bring with the release of his newly published book, The Ledger of Good and Evil.

From ancient Chinese teachings comes a method by which one can observe one's self honestly, take control of one's actions and free one's self from the stronghold of circumstance and negativity. Like a stone falling into a pond, one's thoughts, emotions, actions, and inactions ripple out into the world. In sharing the message of this book, the author hopes that everyone's combined ripples will send a tidal wave of benevolence through humanity and pave the way for a world where hatred, greed, fear and war can finally be left at the riverbank.

This book offers a ray of hope and light in these times of pain, guilt, and animosity, with its strong message of getting rid of the negative vibes by starting with one's own self.

About the Author

Teja A. Jaensch is a Kung Fu master and Chinese Medicine physician. He wrote his first book, a novella titled Yi Sheng: Remember the Spirit, in 1997. After completing degrees in Chinese Medicine and International Studies at the University of Technology, Sydney, and the Yunnan Normal University in Kunming, China, he undertook his postgraduate studies at the Hunyuan Research Institute, and co-authored The Lost Heart of Medicine. Currently he is the Director of the Hunyuan Research Institute Australia. He runs a busy clinic with his wife and is the head coach at the Kung Fu Academy in the Hills District of Sydney.

I Want a Cocky for Christmas

V.J. Farrell

$11.07 • 188 pages • 978-1-942703-08-2

If you own a Sulphur Crested Cockatoo, you would know that having it as a pet is a huge commitment. That's why in this book, the author covers the responsibilities of ownership – from the selection of the species to the pitfalls of training and care.

Her comical and sad family stories are used to reinforce this message of responsible pet ownership. To inspire other Cockatoo owners and lovers, she begins with her early experiences with her Cockatoo, then remembers her second bird and the sad story of how he succumbed to PFD, a very harsh viral disease, and lastly, shares the story of Bert, her third and most exceptional Cockatoo that became a celebrity in his own right by entertaining the public with fund-raising and human interest presentations.

THE GRACE OF KINGS

THE DEBUT OF A NEW VOICE IN FANTASY

Known for writing short stories and novellas, which have earned him two Hugo Awards, the Nebula Award, and a World Fantasy Award, Liu delivers his highly anticipated debut novel—the first book in an epic fantasy series that’s sure to be embraced by fans of intrigue, intimate plots, and action.

You lived in China until you immigrated with your family to the U.S. when you were 11 years old. Had you already discovered sci-fi, or was it after you arrived in America?

The very first work I read that would be classified as “sci-fi” in a bookstore was a Chinese translation of Philip K. Dick’s Do Androids Dream of Electric Sheep. I loved the way it explored the question of what it means to be human using a set of technological metaphors.

However, I’m not very attached to genre labels, and I could make a plausible argument that Paradise Lost, Book VIII, contains a proto-sci-fi story in the argument between Adam and the angel Raphael. And since I view sci-fi as a specific sub-branch of fantasy, I could also make an argument that many of the Chinese historical romances contain elements of sci-fi (e.g., the various exploits of the peerless strategist Zhuge Liang).

In other words, I think although we tend to discover sci-fi as a marketing genre label as we develop our reading habits, sci-fi—broadly defined as a way of thinking—has always existed in various literary traditions.

It is this idea of tracing throughout history the pre-figurements and faint echoes of what we think of as uniquely modern that I find fascinating, and it’s a thematic strand in my fiction.

9781481424271 / $27.99 Hardcover / Saga Press

Is there a particular author or work that put you on the path to becoming a writer?

I think great authors or works put us on the path to being lifelong readers; taking up writing, on the other hand, might be a sort of compulsion one is born with.

Even as a child, I'm told that I liked making up stories and telling them to my grandparents and aunts and uncles. Later, I told stories to my classmates in kindergarten and first grade, and I recall having to work extra hard to keep the attention of my fellow five-year-olds.

My literary tastes and influences would probably be described as eclectic. Since I'm bilingual, I might be somewhat unusual among American writers in being equally influenced by the Western storytelling tradition running from the Iliad to Anglo-Saxon histories to Renaissance poetry to latinate Miltonic prose to 19th-century literature of the uncanny to the postmodern fabulism of David Mitchell, as well as the Chinese storytelling tradition running from classical Warring States Period narrative poetry to Han Dynasty histories to Tang Dynasty lyrical verse to oral pingshu performances to classic Jin Yong martial arts fantasies of the 20th century to contemporary genre novels and Web-based serial epics. This blended literary style, however, is firmly rooted in the Anglo-American melting pot tradition.

After writing mostly short stories and novellas, you are taking the plunge into epic fantasy with your first novel, The Grace of Kings—Book One of the Dandelion Dynasty. Can you share with us how the idea for this story came about?

My wife actually gave me the idea for the novel first. Both of us are familiar with historical romances in the Chinese literary tradition—analogueous to Western epics in some sense—and, one day, she simply turned to me and said, "Why not re-imagine one of these stories and give it a new life?"

I describe the novel as a "silkpunk epic fantasy," by which I mean that I'm writing with and against the tradition of epic fantasy—as began by Tolkien—by infusing it with an East-Asia-inspired aesthetic that embraces, extends, and challenges fantasy/historical tropes that are assumed to have medieval European or classical East Asian origins.

The story is based on a loose re-imagining of the historical legends surrounding the rise of the Han Dynasty in a new fantasy archipelago setting.

“ I think great authors or works put us on the path to being lifelong readers; taking up writing, on the other hand, might be a sort of compulsion one is born with. ”

Although very different from my past work, some of my key themes, e.g., the value of history and the meaning of the complex web of reciprocal duties between individuals, families, and larger social units, are echoed here. This is a world of politics and intrigue, of love purified and corrupted, of rebelling against tyranny and seeing one's ideals compromised, of friendships forged and sundered by the demands of war and statecraft. There are vain and jealous gods, bamboo airships and biomechanics-inspired submarines, battle kites that evoke the honor and glory of another age, fantastical creatures of the deep, and magical tomes that tell the future written in our hearts. I hope readers have as much fun reading the novel as I had in writing it.

“World-building” has become popular in the fantasy and sci-fi genre. How did you construct the archipelago of Dara and its Seven Kingdoms?

As I'm a technologist at heart—I'm a programmer and also an attorney working in the field of IP litigation consulting—the world-building of Dara, a land of fantasy, relied on technology to a great extent.

I used a wiki to track various details about the world—animal, vegetable, mineral, culture, anthropology, timeline, history, language, technology, religion, etc. I also did a lot of research in historical technology and even consulted old patents to ensure that the silkpunk technologies I invented were within an order of magnitude of being plausible. I wrote translation software to enable various phrases to be translated into Classical Ano, a fantasy language. Finally, I learned to use mapping software to design the map for Dara, which is the foundation for the action that unfolds on its vast stage.

The Grace of Kings* is one of the first releases from Simon & Schuster's new Saga Press, an all-inclusive science fiction and fantasy imprint. How did your relationship with them begin?

One could argue that Saga and I were fated to be together. Saga's executive editor, Joe Monti, was actually my first agent. He literally got to see The Grace of Kings develop from a rough outline and a hand-drawn map into the final silkpunk fantasy that you're holding in your hands. I was both sad and happy when he hung up his agenting shingle to become an editor—sad because he would no longer be my agent, and happy because the field had one more great editor to champion authors.

Luckily, after Joe and I said good-bye, I landed with Russ Galen, my current agent and one of the smartest people I know in the world. He told me that the novel was ready and promptly made the deal with Saga, ensuring that Joe and I would get to work together once more.

You have a unique hobby—repairing vintage typewriters. How did that begin?

My grandfather had an ancient typewriter that I used to play with as a kid, and so I've always had an emotional attachment to these machines. They're complicated, but it's also possible to learn how they work with no specialized knowledge or tools just by patiently taking them apart.

Unfortunately, given the constraints of having a full-time job, young children at home, and meeting publishing deadlines, I no longer have much free time to work on typewriters these days.

So what's next for you?

I'm busily working on the sequels to The Grace of Kings—expect the second book next year!—and there are some short fiction and translation projects that are keeping me more than busy.

Thank you very much for having me in these pages!

ONE WOMAN'S JOURNEY from ENDLESS HUNGER
to SPIRITUAL FULFILLMENT

Fed up with binge eating, fad diets, and hating her body, Kimber Simpkins decides to get to the bottom of her unhappy relationship with food. As she fights to overcome the inner demons of self-criticism that torment her, she realizes she's not truly hungry for food—she is starving for spiritual fulfillment.

Full of wisdom and heart, this memoir is an unflinching look at the all-too-common war between a woman and her body.

Catch the Jew!

Tuvia Tenenbom

PB / 468pp / ISBN 9789652297983 / $24.95

"...Tenenbom's riveting tale, chock full of unbelievable and hilarious encounters, is highly engaging and emotional, eminently readable, brutally honest, and likely the most uncensored and eye-opening report readers will see."

(Publishers Weekly starred review, March 2015)

"One of the funniest books I've read in years... Tuvia Tenenbom is a brilliant satirist and an extraordinary reporter..."

(Yossi Klein Halevi, author)

"Bluntly satirical...irresistibly fascinating... seductive and engaging."

(The New York Times)

CATCH THE JEW! recounts the adventures of Tuvia Tenenbom, who wanders around Israel of our time calling himself Tobi the German. In the course of numerous interviews Tuvia extracts information, sentiments, hidden theories and delusional visions motivating the miscellany of peoples forming the present-day Holy Land.

- DOES PALESTINIAN WIFE number one hate the Jews more than she hates wife number two?
- WHO DOES a young German tourist hate more, her dead Nazi grandpa or the just-born Jewish baby?
- WHO FINANCES cash-rich NGOs pursuing a Judenrein Israel?
- WHO SETS Palestinian olive groves on fire and why?
- WHAT DO you see from a Piper Cherokee above a Bedu camp?
- WHO ARE the flaming feminists who sacrifice their lives for the rights of polygamists?
- WHOSE LAND is this, anyway?

CATCH THE JEW!, the most humorous composition on the Middle East to date, is a polyglot spin around a cultural miscegenation in a very small space. However, its never-daunted author finds that with labneh, strudel, olive oil, apple pie, kebab, rugelach, hummus and schnitzel, a happy tummy can bear us through even the most appalling matters. Except the conclusion.
