Bridges is a civil rights icon, activist, author, and speaker who, at the age of six, was the first Black student to integrate William Frantz Elementary, an all-white elementary school in Louisiana. Bridges is the recipient of numerous awards, including the NAACP Martin Luther King Award and the Presidential Citizens Medal, and she has received honorary doctorate degrees from Connecticut College; College of New Rochelle; Teachers College, Columbia University; and Tulane University. She lives in Louisiana with her family. Learn more at rubybridges.com.

Sharing the touching tale of reuniting with the first-grade teacher who changed her life, Bridges presents this love letter to educators that illuminates the lasting impact that the best of teachers can have on the lives of their students. Trudy Tran’s emotive rendering of Bridges from childhood to adulthood brings new life to this heartwarming story of a reunion between two long lost best friends.

Tell us about your new book, Ruby Bridges: A Talk with My Teacher.

When I was only six years old, I was the first Black child to integrate William Frantz Elementary School. I became best friends with my first-grade teacher, Mrs. Henry. I was excited to come back for the second year but was devastated to learn that Mrs. Henry wouldn’t be my second-grade teacher. This story is a love letter to all teachers who hold the power to change lives and shows the lasting impact that the best of teachers can have on the lives of their students.

What inspired you to write A Talk with My Teacher?

A Talk with My Teacher was inspired by memories of the year I spent alone with Barbara Henry, my first-grade teacher, and writing it is my way to honor her and all teachers. She profoundly affected my life at the time and helped shape me to become the person I am today.

What do you hope that readers will take away from this story?

My hope is that sharing my memories with you will stir your own memories of a certain teacher who may have been in your life or inspire appreciation for what a special teacher can do to mold who you will become. After all, teachers today are the first responders in the lives of their students, our babies. And even though I know it is the noblest of professions, teachers are not honored nearly enough or appreciated as such. This story is indeed meant to be a tribute, not just to Mrs. Henry—the teacher of whom I am most fond—but a tribute to all teachers who have chosen to shape the lives of children, including this country’s future leaders.

“ My hope is that sharing my memories with you will stir your own memories of a certain teacher who may have been in your life... ”

Suggested activities for readers:

My Reunion Day

Mrs. Henry and Ruby reunite after 35 years! Imagine a reunion with someone you like to spend time with. Brainstorm words that would describe your reunion. How would you feel when you reunite? What would you like to do together? Where would you be when you meet again? What might you want to talk about?

Signs of Kindness

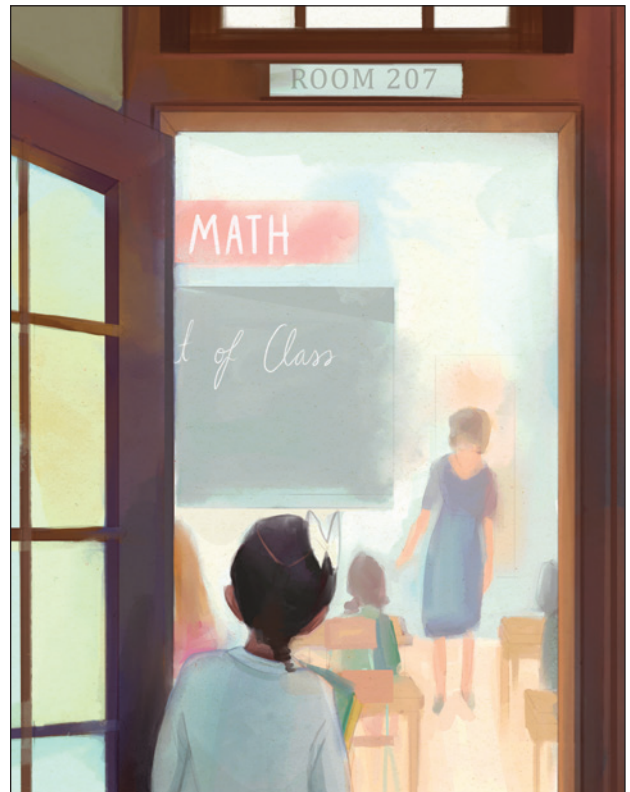

Six-year-old Ruby Bridges is alone when she walks into her new school. What would it feel like to be supported and accepted instead? Plan and/or design a sign that would make you feel welcome in a new place—feel free to use both words and images! For the actual sign, you can use paper, poster board, cardboard, or whatever you have available. Consider how large the images and words should be to be visible in a crowd. If you're in a group, you can also practice having one person at a time walk through a doorway to see the signs and hear welcoming cheers!

Write to Ruby Bridges

Bridges is a civil rights icon, activist, author, and speaker who at the age of six was the first Black student to integrate William Frantz Elementary, an all-white school in Louisiana. What would you put in a letter to her? INGRAM
