The Flowering

Judy Chicago
Foreword by Gloria Steinem
9780500094389, $39.95
Thames & Hudson

Iconic feminist artist Chicago reexamines her life and career in this inspiring autobiography. Included are untold stories, personal images, and many photographs. She has always been fearless in her examination of misogyny, racism, xenophobia, etc., and this narrative traces her journey through decades of work. The book will be published July 20th, 2021, her 82nd birthday.

The Orphans of Davenport

Marilyn Brookwood
9781631494680, $28.95
Liveright Publishing Corporation

The role of environment has not always been accepted as a factor in intelligence. This nature-vs.-nurture debate played out in Davenport, Iowa, back in 1934, when a pair of toddler girls with very low IQs were considered inherently "doomed from birth". They were sent to an institution for the "feebleminded" to be cared for by "moron" women. But under the women's care, the girls' IQs subsequently tested normal, as did those of 13 other "retarded" children. When the results were published by the Iowa psychologists, the attack by the greater psychiatric community was quick and vicious. A fascinating book about eugenics, classism, and the development of modern views of child development.

Kay

The Final Girl Support Group

Grady Hendrix
9780593201237, $26.00
Berkley Books

Several women who survived massive tragedies in their lives meet in an ongoing therapy support group. They're trying to put their lives back together and get past the horror they each lived through. One day one of the women misses the meeting, and the others must confront their fears to once again survive, but this time they have each other. Hendrix's The Southern Book Club's Guide to Slaying Vampires was a fabulous tale. I expect this one to be just as good.

Kristen Radtke PANT

When the author was in her 20s, she learned that as her father was growing up, he would crawl onto his roof in rural Wisconsin and send signals out on his ham radio in an attempt to reach somebody who would respond. Radtke uses this image as her jumping off point into an exploration of loneliness and the ways in which people attempt to feel closer to one another. 352 pp.

HELEN ELLIS

Bring Your Baggage and Don't Pack Light

ESSAYS ON FRIENDSHIP AMONG GROWN-ASS WOMEN

Ellis is the author of Southern Lady Code, American Housewife, and Eating the Cheshire Cat. Raised in Alabama, she lives with her husband in New York City. You can find her on Twitter @WhatIDoAllDay and Instagram @American-Housewife.

9780385546167 | $23.00 HC | Doubleday Books

“ I want to be a mirror that reflects to my friends how spectacular they are. And I want readers to recognize themselves in my friends. ”

Your work always emphasizes the humor in life, even during its darkest times. In your latest collection, Bring Your Baggage and Don't Pack Light, it seems this theme is at the heart of your essays. What moments in your life, or others', have inspired you to look at, and write about, life in such a darkly comic, yet witty way?

When I remember hard times, I remember the jokes. In Baggage, I write about my friend Vicki, whose laughter has been one of my favorite sounds for 40 years. We've laughed through heartaches, financial struggles, illness, and death. In the first essay, "Grown-Ass Women Gone Mild," Vicki battles breast cancer. Her husband drives her to doctors' appointments, her mother interprets good omens, church ladies bring her casseroles, but I make her laugh. Preparing for chemotherapy, Vicki asked me to rename the port, which would be stuck in her chest, something silly so that she would feel less upset about it, so I called it a gumdrop, her postage stamp; I sang, "You're a little teapot and that there's your spout." After her double mastectomy and reconstruction, we joked about tattoos she could get instead of nipples: maybe two yellow smiley faces, or those 80's Scratch n' Sniff stickers in grape jelly and a root beer float. See, a joke is like a burp. It relieves pressure. Think about a crying baby. A couple of pats on the back and burp! For a moment, everyone in the room feels better. And those moments of relief are what I love to write about.

What do you hope readers take away from this collection? And, do you think we need to have even more open dialogue about women's health?

I want readers to revel in lifelong female friendships. Every piece I write starts with me going: Look how great she is! Like: Look how she beat cancer! Look how she got out of a bad marriage! Look how she made a family! Look how she's the life of the gosh dang party! I want to be a mirror that reflects to my friends how spectacular they are. And I want readers to recognize themselves in my friends. When someone recognizes something in me that I wasn't aware of, I'm floored. I had no idea I'd written so much about women's health. But I most certainly did. In Baggage, I write about cancer, depression, middle-age sex, menopause, "high risk" pregnancy, and plastic surgery. Because we're in our 50s and that's what me and my friends are talking about. So, yes, I want more of us to talk about what we're going through without shame or blame. The more we share, the healthier we are.

You've included an essay about poker. What is it about poker that you enjoy, and what has such a competitive game taught you?

When I play poker, I am my most authentic self. I act like a lady but play like a beast. I don't apologize for winning. In fact, I don't speak unless spoken to. It's the rare spot in my life where I don't feel like I have to entertain everyone. I like being still. Time flies, and I am present in the moment. Outside of writing, poker is the closest that I come to meditation. And playing live in casinos is one of the things I've missed the most during quarantine. Poker players are 4 percent women, so for me, walking into a room full of men is incredibly intimidating. I'm proud that I'm brave enough to play with the boys.

What poker has taught me is that I'm going to fail. I play tournament poker, and the majority of the time, even the best professionals don't walk away with money. That's a lot of failure. But there's always another game, so I give every game my all. I go down swinging. This mentality is invaluable to me when I write. I'm not afraid to write something that sucks. If my editor wants to cut something, I cut it without a fight. Writing is rewriting. There's always a better way to put something, there's always a funnier joke. I'm not going to run out of ideas. As long as I come back to the table and play, I'll be okay.

Do you see your next collection changing gears in any way due to the pandemic? Spending time with family and friends has definitely been altered thanks to COVID-19, but there are still many entertaining stories to share about adjusting to life during "mask-time".

My third collection of essays, which I'm thrilled to say will be published by Doubleday, is about my happy marriage. My husband and I have been together for 26 years, so I have a lot of material, but 2020 gave me the motherlode. Since March 2020, my husband has been working from home as the Editor of CBSNews.com. Every day, he puts on a suit while I slink around our apartment in pajamas (with a cat under one arm and a box of Frosted Flakes under the other) to avoid his Zoom camera. In quarantine, I've become a plant lady, so our apartment looks like the greenhouse scene from Invasion of the Body Snatchers. We both got COVID for Christmas, but my husband tried Viagra for my birthday. So see, there's always a bright side! How can I not write about a year that has brought us closer than ever?

What are some suggestions you might have for ways in which we can all utilize humor more in our lives, given some of the dark times that our country has seen over the last year?

You have to seek out the funny. I watch a lot of stand-up. Fortune Feimster and London Hughes' latest specials are terrific. I had to pause Sam Jay's special at the twenty-minute mark because I was laughing so hard I was hysterically crying. Kevin Hart filmed his most recent show at his own house during lock-down and joked about getting Covid, which I greatly appreciated. I also listen to podcasts that feature comedians: The Pete & Sebastian Show, This Past Weekend with Theo Von, How Neal Feel, and Good for You with Whitney Cummings (but her assistant, Benton Ray, steals every show). Mike Birbiglia and guests work out bits on Working It Out, and Jesse David Fox and his guests dissect bits on Good One (do yourself a favor and listen to Gary Gulman rant about line-leavers at Trader Joes). The Instagram account @Books_with_Bethany reposts hilarious TikToks in her stories. And Samantha Irby and David Sedaris had me laughing this past year with their new books, which they both read on audio.

Your writing has been compared to everyone from Nora Ephron and Amy Sedaris to Shirley Jackson and Flannery O'Connor. Your stories and essays are packed with humor, heart, and...a bit of scandal, but your earlier novels were a bit "darker." Do you anticipate another full-length novel in your future?

I do!

RONALD HERA

Although set in Jesus' time, Bethlehem's Brothers reads like an adventure novel set in a third world country during a violent revolt. Two brothers are swept into the conflict early in their lives and struggle to find the strength to survive amidst the death and destruction. Each searches for a savior, but success eludes them until they finally discover one who has been ruthlessly hunted since he was two years old. Who is this revolutionary who challenges the status quo and should he be trusted? He talks big but is he who he claims to be? The brothers must decide. There is no teetering on the fence!

Enjoy your trip to the first century!

Clayton Tucker and his colleagues at the Dallas Observer eagerly prepare to cover the anniversary of the first human heart transplant using a cloned heart. Cloning, stem cell therapy and gene splicing have become nearly routine in 2042, opening the door to advances in medicine only dreamed of ten years earlier.

Traveling to South Africa where the first heart transplant was initially performed in 1967, Clay discovers that a company named Pontiac Pharmaceuticals had sponsored immunological research, attempting to address the issue of rejection during the original transplant. Later he learns that Pontiac also funded the transplant in Dallas.

Clay and Brian Singh begin looking into Pontiac. They learn that Pontiac is a small part of Omega Security Systems; a multinational arms dealer, and private security agency. Brian travels to the company's headquarters to interview Pontiac's COO Darius Kent, who later arranges a secret meeting with Brian and Clay.

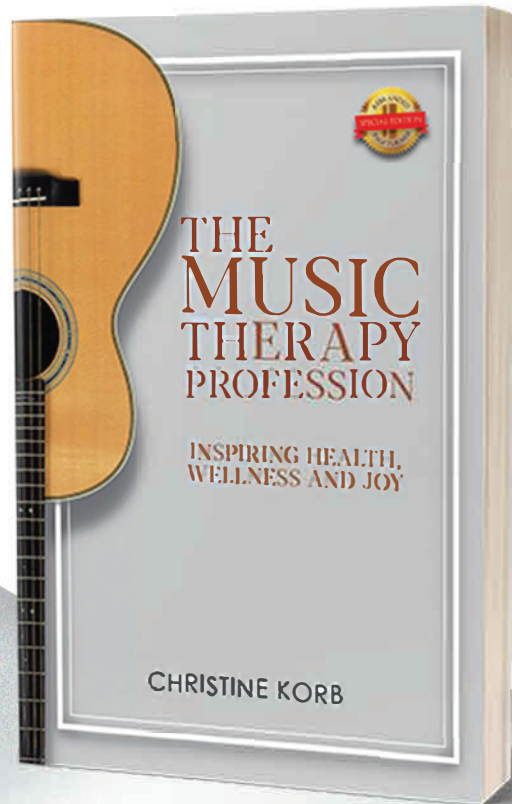

Kent is concerned that an advanced unstable biological weapon is being developed at the company's new lab in Bosnia, a secretive project under the control of the company's president, the "Colonel." Kent helps Clay and Brian infiltrate the lab using a newly developed counter-insurgency device, the "macro skin." Clay and Brian, posing as two of the company's researchers, access the lab's computers.

The two reporters are confronted with the ultimate biological weapon, the "Alastor." Clay and Brian are faced with escaping the lab and getting back to Dallas with the data intact and hopefully in time. The initial field test of the weapon is only days away.

CHRISTINE KORB

THE MUSIC THERAPY PROFESSION

INSPIRING HEALTH,
WELLNESS AND JOY

In The Music Therapy Profession: Inspiring Health, Wellness, and Joy, author Christine Korb dedicates an entire book to demonstrate just how music is important to everyone's lives. We are encouraged to embrace music into all aspects of our lives as it offers more on an emotional level. Music Therapy is a technique used to communicate with others in a way where words can be nonexistent. Some individuals suffer from disabilities and handicaps that cause them to feel isolated in the world and music helps to mend that gap. The author is using her platform of book writing to broaden her reach to encourage others who have the gift of helping others to consider a career in Music Therapy. This will enable those the knowledge that hasn't been shared globally that there is another form of healing, which utilizes the sounds of music.

Truly Inspiring! Highly Recommended.

This is what we all need today! I encourage everyone to grab a copy of the book.

- Barnes & Noble Customer Review

This is your time to reawaken the dreams you thought were impossible. Success Is Within You reveals the power to create our goals and dreams resides in all of us and it is stronger than circumstances that may surround our lives. Therefore, you do not have to feel like a victim. When you harness this power within yourself, the universe yields to you and gives you the best of what is possible.

KEVIN DETTLER

is a proud American Farmer. Growing up on the family farm in North Dakota, a love of the outdoors formed at an early age. Forty years has passed as Kevin, along with wife Becky and children Nicole, Kiel and Brett, operated their own family farm in South Dakota. At one time Dettler Farms was in the top 10% of farms in the US by size, producing many different types of crops, including potatoes, popcorn, dark red kidney beans, corn, soybeans, wheat, sunflowers and barley.

A love for hunting paralleled his love for farming. Hunting became a passion during college at North Dakota State University. The author worked hard to balance farming, family, and hunting trips with friends. Serving on the board of many farm organizations prepared Kevin for the role of national president of United States Custom Harvesters.
