JODI PICOULT

Wish You Were Here

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN LIFE DOESN'T GO ACCORDING TO PLAN?

Jodi Picoult is the #1 New York Times-bestselling author of 27 novels, including The Book of Two Ways, A Spark of Light, Small Great Things, Leaving Time, and My Sister's Keeper, and, with her daughter Samantha van Leer, also wrote two young adult novels, Between the Lines and Off the Page.

9781984818416 | $28.99 HC | Ballantine Books

“ I think that’s the role of artists—to help all of us sift through what we’ve learned after a cataclysmic event, and to be the beacon that leads us forward. ”

What sparked the idea to write a story centered around the COVID-19 pandemic, especially now?

I think of Wish You Were Here as the book I never wanted or intended to write. The moment we went into lockdown, I started wondering how writers were going to incorporate the story of the pandemic into the canon of fiction. I think that’s the role of artists – to help all of us sift through what we’ve learned after a cataclysmic event, and to be the beacon that leads us forward. I do think that this is the right time for this book. We are still in the throes of the pandemic, but we have vaccines, and hope. Five years from now, we will have moved on—maybe without really considering what we learned about ourselves during this time. I think that we are all still in need of closure and healing—and I hope that Wish You Were Here can start to provide that.

Was it difficult to sit down and write this novel during the past year when we weren’t quite sure how, or when, this pandemic would end?

Yes. I started writing it while I was in very tight lockdown. I have asthma and literally did not leave my house for 15 months. I hadn’t been vaccinated, but I knew scientists were working around the clock on that. I was very aware when I wrote the final scene of the book, which takes place a few years in the future, that it was aspirational. But I also think I needed to write it that way—to know that there is going to be a moment when every day is not about COVID-19.

In your Author’s Note, you mentioned how you reached out and listened to COVID-19 survivors who were under a ventilator. What about their experience stood out to you most? Were there also healthcare workers willing to share their experience and how did their experiences impact you?

I went on social media to find patients who had survived ventilation. In 10 minutes, I had over 200 responses. I wound up interviewing about 40 people about their hospitalization. All of them were so desperate to tell their stories. They want people to know this “isn’t the flu” and that COVID-19 isn’t some government conspiracy. I tried to do justice to their experiences by braiding them together and using as many details as I could in the novel. There are specific things that blew my mind that they ALL had in common, but I can’t tell you that without giving away a twist. As for the healthcare workers, I interviewed about 30 of them. I really wanted to hear from younger health care professionals who were reassigned to COVID-19 wards instead of having a normal surgical residency, etc. I would hold it together during those Zoom interviews, hang up, and then cry. These men and women were so brave, so exhausted, and so confused by the dissonance between what they saw in the hospitals and what they saw when their shifts were done. As one doctor told me, she had gotten into this line of work to fix people. But COVID-19 patients, you can’t fix. You mostly wait until their lungs are so shot they are ventilated, and the vast majority of those then die. But then, to leave the hospital and hear the President say that bleach can cure COVID-19.. well, can you imagine how incredibly hopeless that might be for a health care worker? One doctor told me that he had to stop talking to his father because his dad believed COVID-19 was a hoax. Another said he was sick of people clapping for first responders and holding up signs, when all they really wanted was for people to wear a damn mask.

In what ways do you hope readers are inspired to live after reading your book, and as life returns to normal after COVID-19?

EVERYONE has lost something during this pandemic. For some people it's a vacation, a wedding, a job. It could be a normal freshman year at college, or a graduation from law school. For others it's the ultimate loss—a loved one. These losses are all different, but they're all valid, and we deserve to grieve them. I also think that when we were forcibly stopped by lockdown, we took a good look at our lives with a scrutiny we often forget to focus on ourselves. We might have thought certain things were important—a promotion, a degree, a career high—and then, as it turned out, none of that was as critical as a healthy body, a roof over our head, seeing family—or even having the privilege of being at a bedside to say goodbye to someone you love. I would like to think that as the world reopens in this new normal, we won't forget what we learned during this Year of Pause. I hope we'll continue to be the kind of people who value the smaller moments over the benchmarks of success by which we have previously been told to measure our lives.

Now that we're, hopefully, edging closer to a post-pandemic lifestyle once again, what's next for you, both in your writing and personal life? What 2020 plans were paused that you hope to start again in the future?

I am SO EXCITED to be on a small, safe in-person book tour for Wish You Were Here—Zoom events just aren't the same, and I completely took my amazing readers for granted, and cannot wait to be in a room with them all again. In other news, the last thing I did in the "real world" before we shut down was watch my son get engaged to a wonderful woman, and they will FINALLY have their wedding in 2022! In fact 2022 is shaping up to be a remarkably jam-packed year. The off-Broadway musical Between the Lines, based on the book I wrote with my daughter Samantha van Leer, was supposed to debut in 2020 but was sidelined by the pandemic...and will have a new opening in the summer of 2022. That will be immediately followed by the musical of The Book Thief, which I co-wrote, debuting in the UK. And perhaps I'll go on tour for my next novel—more on that soon. Of course, after last year, I'm a little more wary now...I don't know if I'll believe any of these things will actually happen until I'm literally walking through the door!

ADVANCE INTERVIEW

BRENÉ BROWN

Atlas of the Heart

A FRAMEWORK FOR MEANINGFUL CONNECTION

The five-time #1 New York Times-bestselling author is a research professor at the University of Houston, where she holds the Huffington Foundation-Brené Brown Endowed Chair at the Graduate College of Social Work. She hosts the Unlocking Us and Dare to Lead podcasts, and her TEDx talk, "The Power of Vulnerability," is one of the top five most-viewed TED talks in the world.

“ With an adventurous heart and the right maps, we can travel anywhere... ”

Why is the book called Atlas of the Heart?

In most of my books I've shared the line, "I am a mapmaker and a traveler." It's my way of saying that I don't have all the answers. I have data, and I use that data to chart a course that I'm sharing and trying to navigate at the same time. When I set out to communicate these eighty-seven emotions and experiences, I thought of maps and how beautifully they integrate many layers of information. I want this to be an atlas for all of us because I believe that, with an adventurous heart and the right maps, we can travel anywhere and never fear losing ourselves.

What is the book about?

Atlas of the Heart is a book about finding our way back to ourselves and to each other, especially in a time when we are experiencing a lot of uncertainty, anxiety, and fear. I wanted to provide an actionable framework for meaningful connection, and to explore the language and tools necessary to access a universe where we can share and steward the stories of our bravest and most heartbreaking moments with one another.

What were some of your biggest insights from this new research?

Doing this research and writing this book has taught me that our emotions and experiences are layers of biology, biography, behavior, and back-story. Every single day, our feelings and experiences show up in our bodies, they're shaped by where we come from and how we were raised, they drive how we show up, and each feeling has its own unique backstory. We are emotional beings. Understanding these experiences is our life's work. The more we learn, the deeper we can continue to explore.

I've also learned that our connection with others can only be as deep as our connection with ourselves. If I don't know and understand who I am and what I need, want, and believe, I can't share myself with you. I need to be connected to myself, in my own body, and learning what makes me work. This is how we develop the grounded confidence we need to move through the world and cultivate meaningful connection with others.

What do we have to gain from having a more granular understanding of the language of emotion?

To form meaningful connections with others, we must first connect with ourselves, but to do either, we must first establish a common understanding of the language of emotion and human experience. Years ago, we collected surveys from over 7,000 people and the average number of emotions they could recognize in themselves and name was three: happy, sad, and angry.

Trying to express the vastness of human emotion and experience through so few words is severely limiting. Without accurate language, we struggle to get the help we need, we don’t always regulate or manage our emotions and experiences in a way that allows us to move through them productively, and our self-awareness is limited. One way this learning has been reflected in my own life is that I am now way more thoughtful in labeling what I am feeling. For example, people often use words like jealous and envious, joy and happiness, sarcasm and irony, or tranquility and contentedness interchangeably. The research tells us that the more accurately we can name what we are feeling, the better our emotion regulation and psychosocial well-being.

How did you choose which emotions and feelings to include?

The list of emotions and experiences that I present in this book first emerged from a content analysis of over 550,000 comments from an online course I taught. The course had a significant component on emotions and connection. After de-identifying the comments (no names) and going through the human subjects’ approval process, I analyzed the data using two questions: What are the emotions and experiences that emerge the most often and which emotions and experiences do people struggle to name or label? This yielded approximately 150 emotions and experiences. From there, we further honed the list using an invaluable focus group of experienced therapists who work in diverse mental health settings and our internal research team. Once we had the final list, we used the course data to better understand how people actually use language when describing their feelings.

What do you hope readers will take away from the book?

It’s pretty simple—I want us to find a way back to ourselves and each other. We are so much better at causing pain than we are at feeling pain. If we can just turn toward what’s hard in our lives and talk about it with someone we trust, we can change ourselves and the world. I hope this book offers people the language, tools, and courage to lean into our emotions and lean into each other. We don’t have to do this alone. We were never meant to.

What book are reading right now?

I’m rereading Tarana Burke’s new memoir, Unbound. Tarana is unflinching in her storytelling. As she takes us on the journey that transformed her life and the world, we can feel our own transformation happening. The person who starts this book is not the person who finishes this book.

Was there a song/songs that you listened to often during the writing of this book?

My 16-year-old has started collecting vinyl (insert proud parent emoji), so that inspired me to listen to a lot of my old albums while I was writing. I love all genres of music, from Nick Cave and Leonard Cohen to Mavis Staples and Dolly Parton. And my kids make me great playlists of new music they think I’d like. A-O-K by Tai Verdes is a favorite of Charlie’s—I found myself listening to it a lot when I got stuck.

"PAL" MEANS POSITIVE ATTITUDES FOR LIFE. WE ALL HAVE ATTITUDES, WE ALL HAVE CHOICES. THE PAL PUPPY SERIES HAS A MISSION FOR ALL YOUNG CHILDREN: TO BECOME MORE AWARE OF CHOICES. MANY PROBLEMS CAN BE SOLVED BY USING "COMMON SENSE," BUT COMMON SENSE ISN'T ALL THAT COMMON. IT IS SOMETHING THAT NEEDS TO BE DEVELOPED, STARTING AT A YOUNG AGE. IT INVOLVES CHOICES. IT INVOLVES HAVING THE PROPER ATTITUDE.

AS AN AUTHOR, I WANT YOUNG CHILDREN TO HAVE A SAFE PLACE TO LEARN AN IMPORTANT LESSON IN LIFE: BELIEVE IN YOURSELF, MAKE GOOD CHOICES. What she doesn't expect is to get literally sucked into the game, trapped as a playable character. And the game? It's an extremely dangerous, war-torn shooter, and if Ivy is going to get out, she'll first have to survive. Priyanka Nambiar is a teen author whose manuscript won the International Writing Contest of Stone Soup magazine and MacKenzie Press.
